The Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) New Jersey Division will be conducting a one day seminar on Methamphetamine Safety and Awareness for First Responders. This training program is designed to prepare the police officer, firefighter, or EMT to recognize specialized problems and hazards associated with the production of methamphetamine. Topics which will be covered will include History and Effects of Methamphetamine, Emerging Trends in Methamphetamine Production, and Clandestine Laboratories Awareness. The objective of this course is to enable the first responder emergency personnel to be able to recognize and identify a methamphetamine or clandestine laboratory while answering a fire, medical, or other emergency call and apply techniques for overall safety.
